Xaviera Hollander was one of the leading voices to change the way we think and talk about sex. Arguably the most famous of the modern madams who have titillated fans over the years, Hollander was assured her place in history with her autobiographical mega-seller, The Happy Hooker: My Own Story, with over 20 million copies sold worldwide.

According to filmmaker Dr. Robert Dunlap and producer John Patrick Patti, Hollander had a powerful impact on the feminist movement and the Sexual Revolution of the 1970's. She was punished for her provocative views and her honesty about her brothel enterprises. That didn't stop the world from embracing her published books, 20 to date, and her Penthouse magazine column, "Call Me Madam" ran for nearly 35 years.

This one-hour documentary includes extensive archival footage, current musings by "The Happy Hooker" herself, her friends and many lovers, and commentary from foremost sexologists and CNN's Larry King.
